Haiku Competition

I do Haiku law
Limited to 5, 7,5
Makes for a short day

Richard O'Connor

An eight hour day,
Seemed to last forever,
Only billed five.

Andy Simpson, Christiansted, St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands

solo attorneys in this illustrious group we are not alone

Robert J. Strupp, Baltimore, Maryland

I worked very hard
To be as broke as I am
At least I have friends

It could be much worse
My clients all have crap lives
I would not swap with

There is no feeling good as making a difference
As only you could do

To have this knowledge
To work to make it better
Would not be elsewhere

Jim Moriarty, Cresco, Iowa

Summertime is here
I'm going to the office
Goodbye vacation

Bruce Swenson

Solo, so alone
Less lonely than ant firm. though
We have Solosez

Andy Simpson, Christiansted, St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands

SOLiloquy speaks
Summer SOLstice slowly steams SOLosez sizzles.

Charlie Abut, New Jersey

Ladies discuss shoes.
Guys discuss guns and ammo.
Flame sure to follow.

C.J. Stevens, Montana

What is a haiku?
Why do we need to write one?
It takes too much time.

David Hiersekorn, Santa Ana, California

Law, the seamless web, Toil not, nor do we weave.
Law—a stern seamstress can be.

Richard O'Connor

Sezzers are crazy
But a happy lot they are
A soup full of nuts

[Written with affection!]

Meg Tebo, Chicago, Illinois

O Solo mio
I should have a headache, but I have bills to pay

You going to lunch?
Oh! Whoopsie, I mistook my lamp for a human.

Frederick Mischler, Dayton, Ohio

Writing a long brief
Talking to myself again
Where is solosez?

Karla Y. Vogel, Decatur, Georgia

I am all alone
Nobody will work with me
Wish I had clients.

Oh solo, me. "Oh
Mrs. Smith: you whine too much...!"
Result? Vacation.

I'm ordering in.
Busy, busy, busy me.
Jeopardy re-runs.

Robert W. Pladek

Silver-tongued
Orators rate each other Meritorious.

R. Stephen Hansell, Florence, Montana

this work, U. S. Code
Title Seventeen, section
One Hundred and Six.)

Muse, I beseech thee,
Allow me to write the verse
That warms COTE's cockles.

Minions we have none,
ABA gives no respect;
Still, we persevere.

Two hundred against,
but a lone solo supports;
Goliath should fear.

Word or WordPerfect, which is more holy, one asks;
Tools, grasshopper, tools.

"Market" sez Becki, take the opportunity;
Cash is held sacred.

Paper LESS, Ross sez, a great idea, no doubt but no IP rights.

Beacon lights the night
PDF problem, you say;
AcroBatman's here.

The blue screen of death,
what to do to recover;
The penguin can help.

Incantations too,
Dorner the Elder suggests; Solos make magic.

(The gratuitous mention should get Bruce to send me a cool button.)

But once all is said and done, solos are people
Big Law are mere ants.

Have mercy on me,
Lord, and lesser judges, and on Bubba Leroy.

James S. Tyre, Culver City, California

Whew!! I say, in awe Jim has just engaged in Haiku overkill

Richard O'Connor

My receivables
Going up and down again
Clients are coming?

Andrea Goldman, Newton, Massachusetts

practice law alone
so others may together practice life

John Mitchell

The law is, they say,
A seamless web, more or less.
But beware spiders!

Richard O'Connor

Solosez abuzz,
The deadline is upon us;
Who won and what prize?

James S. Tyre, Culver City, California
