

Postage Question for Those Doing Virtual Work

I use Endicia for my office postage. I just picked up some contract work for another attorney. It will probably be about 10 hours or so per week.

I will occasionally mail things from my office. I would like to segregate the postage that I use for him from my own.

I have the standard version of Endicia. Apparently I will need to upgrade my account with them to set up multiple profiles, for an extra $25.00 per month. I'm not going to spend that just for this.

So clearly I need a secondary provider for this. I don't have time to hunt around. What is the cheapest service I can find for something like this?

The only thing I want to do is to be able to print postage directly on the envelopes. I won't need to use labels.

---

I use stamps.com. I can assign my office's matter numbers to track postage. But we also go ahead and enter any extraordinary postage costs in our billing program at the same time. I don't charge for postage unless it is more than $2 or I'm sending a letter to a dozen beneficiaries of an estate. Just not worth it.

Deborah Matthews, Virginia

---

I agree. By the way, I'm on the unadvertised $7.99/month Stamps.com plan. It restricts you to having no more than $25 in postage in the account, and has some other restrictions I have never noticed as being relevant to me, but saves a few bucks a month.

Michael Koenecke, Texas

---

Why don't you just keep a spreadsheet or text file on your computer and update it with the date, postage cost, and description each time you use postage for that matter?

Ryan Phillips

---

I just called Stamps.com to look into this, they said they no longer have the $7.99 plan but have a $9.99 plan that sounds just as good for my needs as the $15.99 plan i was one ($15.99 was the cheapest one they offer on the website)

Todd B. Rhoads, California

---