

Conference Call Vendor

Hi folks:

I need to set up a conference call involving several parties located in at least four (4) different locations. I am looking for recommendations for a service/technology that is user friendly and can best accommodate this purpose.

Thank you.

---

I am interested in recommended solutions as well. Please reply on-list.
Thx

Lyza L. Sandgren, paralegal

---

I use www.FreeConferenceCall.com

You register once and they send you a telephone number, an access code and a host pin to use. Once the call is completed, you get an e-mail detailing the telephone numbers that were on the call and how long each was on the call.

Walter D. James III, Texas

---

I second the recommendation. I've used it before when teaching online so students in various states could join a seminar and be able to hear and talk to each other. It worked great. None of the students had any problem getting in.

Liz Ferguson

---

I use and recommend www.freeconference.com - which sometimes ppl confuse with freeconferenceCALL.com

Andrea Cannavina, notta

---

I've had very spotty results using freeconferencecall.com and am looking for an alternative. I have not investigated freeconference.com so thx. Any others? Thx again.

Lyza L. Sandgren

---

I've also had decent luck with freeconferencecalling.com (note the ING at the end of the URL). For reasons I can't explain, freeconferencecall.com calls did not go well if someone was calling in on a VOIP line. Our firm actually uses join.me for firm calls. There is a free version, not sure what the limitations are.

Kevin W. Grierson, Virginia

---

I use Timebridge. I'm not sure if it has a recording feature, but it's great for proposing and confirming meetings without dozens of emails.

Pamela (the Paralegal) J. Starr

---

With the caveat that I work for Microsoft....

...Skype for Business handles that kind of task pretty easily. Even allows screen sharing, presentations, video and recording.

Disclaimer: Still never been a lawyer at Microsoft or any other company

Ben M. Schorr, Washington

---

I've been pretty happy with UberConference. <https://www.uberconference.com/>

They offer free service, but will sell you a local number or an 800 number for a reasonable price. The nice thing with your own line - you can set it so that no codes are needed. People just call in or you call them from the system and they are in the call.

Mark Lyon

---

I second Uberconference. We have the $15 / month service. It also can call out to the various people, and can record phone calls.

We used FreeConferenceCall.com for a long time, but it has been playing a message to certain mobile carriers that they may be charged a $0.01 per minute - so we stopped it. Also, the moniker "free" was not the right image I wanted.

Murtaza Sutarwalla

---

I just signed up with UberConference. It integrates with Google Calendar.

Rex C. Anderson, Arizona

---